

Jennifer Dailey-Perkins

As the Education Partnership and Resource Specialist within the Department of Defense Education Activity (DoDEA), Jennifer Dailey-Perkins is responsible for establishing and nurturing networks, collaborative efforts, and coordinating agency outreach to champion quality educational opportunities for military children in public schools. Major components of her duties include serving as the DoDEA Grant Program Manager responsible for the oversight of over $500 million in grant funding to schools serving highly military impacted school districts throughout the United States. These grant funds directly impact over 700,000 military-connected students and over 2 million public school students.

Mrs. Dailey-Perkins holds a Post-Graduate certificate in Strategic Planning and Urban Policy from Walden University, a Master in Social Work degree from Virginia Commonwealth University, a Bachelor of Science degree from Miami University (OH), and is a graduate of the Office of Personnel Management, Graduate School USA Executive Leadership Program.

Prior to arriving at DoDEA in 2012, Mrs. Dailey-Perkins served in various federal capacities for more than a decade in support of military child education. She has held positions throughout the DoD to include abroad, providing exemplary civilian service as a regional and major command School Liaison Officer. Mrs. Dailey-Perkins, a native of Cleveland, Ohio, is a proud soccer mom, and the wife of a post 9-11, Air Force veteran.
