

LTG Darrell K. Williams

Lieutenant General Darrell K. Williams is the Director of the Defense Logistics Agency (DLA) where he provides strategic leadership for the Defense Department's combat support agency for worldwide logistics. DLA provides food, medical material, uniforms and construction equipment, 98 percent of the Defense Department's fuel, and the majority of spare parts for military weapons systems. He leads a global, expeditionary workforce of over 25,000 military and civilians.

A native of West Palm Beach, Florida, the LTG Williams is a Distinguished Military Graduate of the Hampton Institute ROTC Program and was commissioned into the Army Quartermaster Corps in 1983. He earned a Bachelor of Arts Degree in Psychology from Hampton Institute, Hampton, Virginia and Master's degrees in Military Arts and Sciences, National Security and Strategic Studies, and Business Management (Logistics).