Lieutenant General (Ret.) Robert Caslen, the 59th Superintendent of West Point, and Dr. Michael Matthews, Professor of Psychology at West Point, join MCEC at the NTS to explore what educators can do to promote values-driven education with the goal of influencing students toward a life that embraces and displays the moral virtues of wisdom, courage, humanity, justice, temperance, and transcendence. As authors of The Character Edge: Leading and Winning with Integrity (St. Martin's Press, available October 13, 2020), Caslen and Matthews share lessons learned from a lifetime of studying character and putting it to the test. Don't miss this session as Caslen and Matthews discuss the importance of character, how it is formed and nurtured, and what leaders can do to establish and sustain positive organizations that enable value-driven behavior.
